 Rabbi Chanina Sgan HaKohanim said that in all the days of the kohanim they would burn meat of sacrifices that had become tamei through a derived tumah with meat of sacrifices that had become tamei through an av hatumah.

26 Tammuz 5773

July 4, 2013

Rabbi Chanina Sgan HaKohanim said that as long as the Bais HaMikdash stood and the Kohanim were in charge of disposing of consecrated items that became tamei, the Kohanim did not refrain from burning meat of sacrifices that had become tamei through a velad hatumah, i.e. a derived tumah, together with meat of sacrifices that had become tamei through an av hatumah, i.e. anything that has the ability to make people or utensils tamei. This burning of tamei meat was performed even if by doing this they added tumah to the status of tumah that the meat had obtained previously. (14a)

 Rabbi Akiva said that in all the days of the Kohanim they would use the oil of terumah that had become unfit through contact with a tevul yom in a lamp that had become tamei from someone who became tamei from a corpse.

Rabbi Akiva added to the statement of Rabbi Chanina Sgan HaKohanim and Rabbi Akiva said that as long as the Bais HaMikdash stood, the Kohanim did not refrain from kindling oil of terumah that had become unfit because a tevul yom had touched it in a lamp that had become tamei from one who was tamei because of a corpse. This kindling was performed even though they were adding tumah to the oil of terumah. The oil of terumah touched by a tevul yom is unfit, and therefore is rendered a shelishi. One who became tamei because of a corpse is an av hatumah, and he then went and made the lamp a rishon letumah. Now that the oil is poured into the lamp the oil becomes a Sheini. Given that the oil was previously tamei, the kohanim allowed for the oil to have tumah added to it. (A tevul yom is one who has immersed in a mikveh and now does not make Chullin tamei and is allowed to eat Maaser Sheini, but he cannot eat terumah or kodesh until after sunset. If a tevul yom touches terumah or kodesh, he makes the food a shelishi.) (14a)

3. There is a dispute regarding which type of food can make another food tamei.

A Baraisa taught that one would think that food can make other food tamei, so the Torah must state: but if water has been placed on a seed and then their carcass falls upon it, it is tamei. The words it is tamei teaches us by inference that the seed is tamei but the seed, i.e. food, cannot make another food tamei. Abaye explains the Baraisa to mean that regarding Chullin food cannot make other food tamei, but food of terumah and kodashim can make other food tamei. Rav Adda bar Ahavah said in the name of Rava that food cannot make other food tamei with regard to Chullin and terumah, but food that is kodashim can make another food tamei.

Ravina said in the name of Rava that the biblical verse states clearly that Chullin, terumah and kodashim cannot make other food tamei. Biblically speaking, foods can make liquids tamei and liquids can make foods tamei, and only rabbinically can food make other food tamei. (14a)

A food cannot make other food tamei biblically but food can make other food tamei rabbinically.

The Gemara attempted to explain that what Rabbi Chanina Sgan HaKohanim meant when he said that the kohanim added tumah to the status of tumah was that the meat had a liquid and the liquid is a rishon, and the meat that until now was a shelishi (because the meat became tamei through a velad velad tumah, i.e. a derivative of a derived terumah) became a Sheini because of the liquid. The Gemara rejects this explanation because the Mishnah stated that they would burn meat that became tamei from a velad hatumah with meat that became tamei through an av hatumah and the Mishnah should have stated "together with meat and liquids that became tamei by an av hatumah." Rather, we must offer a different explanation of the Mishnah, and that is that although biblically speaking, one food cannot make another food tamei, a food can rabbinically make another food tamei. Rabbi Chanina was saying that one can burn meat of a sacrifice that is a shelishi along with meat of a sacrifice that is a rishon even though the meat will rabbinically become a Sheini. (14a)

5. A sword is like a corpse with regard to tumah. Rabbi Akiva said that the Kohanim did not refrain from kindling oil of terumah that had become unfit because a tevul yom had touched it in a lamp that had become tamei from one who was tamei

because of a corpse. This kindling was performed even though they were adding tumah to the oil of terumah. The Gemara questions this statement, because oil that became unfit through contact with a tevul yom is a shelishi, and when one kindles the oil in a lamp that became tamei through a corpse, the oil is a Sheini, and we already know from the statement of Rabbi Chanina Sgan HaKohanim that terumah that is a shelishi can become a Sheini. The Gemara answers that the Mishnah is discussing a lamp that is metal and the Torah states: the body of someone felled by a sword, and we learn from this verse that a sword or any other metal object that comes into contact with a corpse is like the body concerning tumah. Thus, the metal lamp that became tamei from one who was a tamei meis, tumah through a corpse, will become an av hatumah. Rabbi Akiva maintains that the oil of terumah that is unfit because it came into contact with a tevul yom and was a shelishi can be made into a rishon. Rabbi Chanina had only taught that a shelishi can become a Sheini, and Rabbi Akiva added that a shelishi can become a Rishon. (14a -14b)

6. There is a distinction between metal becoming tamei through tumah of a corpse and metal becoming tamei through a sheretz.

The Gemara wonders why Rabbi Akiva could not have been referring to a case where the lamp is earthenware and whereas Rabbi Chanina was discussing a case where the meat of the sacrifice remained tamei, just that the meat attained a higher level of tumah, Rabbi Akiva was referring to a case where the oil was initially unfit and was a shelishi, and when kindled in the earthenware lamp that became tamei from a corpse and is a rishon, the oil becomes a Sheini. Now the oil can make other terumah tamei, and this is a noticeable addition to Rabbi Chanina's statement. The Gemara answers that the reason the Mishnah refers to a metal lamp and not an earthenware lamp is because the Mishnah stated that the lamp had become tamei through a tamei meis, and the Mishnah did not state that the lamp had become tamei through a sheretz, a rodent. We infer from the fact that the Mishnah discusses a case where the lamp becomes tamei from a tamei meis that regarding a metal object there is a distinction between becoming tamei through a tamei meis or becoming tamei through a sheretz. When the metal object becomes tamei through a tamei meis, the metal object receives the same level of tumah as that tamei meis, whereas when the metal object becomes tamei through a sheretz, the metal object receives a lesser degree of tumah. (14b)

 Rabbi Akiva maintains that the ability of liquids that are tamei to make other items tamei is biblical in nature.

Rabbi Akiva maintains that liquids that are tamei can make other items tamei from a biblical perspective. Proof of this is because Rabbi Akiva stated that the oil of terumah that is a shelishi and is kindled in the lamp that was tamei now becomes a rishon. The oil was previously unfit because it came into contact with a tevul yom, but its tumah was not strong enough to make other food tamei, and now that it becomes a rishon it can make the food tamei. (14b)

8. Anything that causes terumah to be unfit through contact makes liquids tamei as a rishon except for a tevul yom.

One cannot counter the above-mentioned thesis by claiming that the oil can only make other items tamei rabbinically, because then the lamp does not have to be an av hatumah,. Even if the oil was kindled in lamp that is a rishon or Sheini will be deemed a rishon from a rabbinical standpoint. Proof of this is from a Mishnah that states that anything that makes terumah unfit through contact, like a Sheini that makes terumah a shelishi through contact, will make liquids a rishon, except for a tevul yom which makes terumah unfit through contact but does not cause liquids to become a rishon. Since rabbinically speaking oil that became unfit through contact with a tevul yom can become a rishon even through contact with a Sheinei, Rabbi Akiva must have stated his ruling regarding lighting oil in a lamp that is an av hatumah, where it biblically becomes a rishon, as Rabbi Akiva wanted to teach that oil would have the ability to make other items tamei biblically. We thus see that Rabbi Akiva maintains that liquids that are tamei can make other things tamei from a biblical perspective. (14b)

9. Rabbi Meir said that from the words of Rabbi Chanina Sgan HaKohanim and from the words of Rabbi Akiva we learn that we can burn terumah tehorah of chametz together with the tamei on the eve of Pesach.

Rabbi Meir said that from the words of Rabbi Chanina Sgan HaKohanim and from the words of Rabbi Akiva we learn that we can burn terumah tehorah of chametz together with the tamei on the eve of Pesach. The Gemara challenges this statement, because Rabbi Chanina was referring to a case where the Kohanim burned meat that was tamei with meat that was tamei, and they just added to the level of tumah. Rabbi Meir, however, permitted burning the tahor terumah with the tamei. Rabbi Akiva was referring to burning oil that was unfit in a lamp that was tamei and the oil only was transformed from being unfit to becoming tamei. Rabbi Meir, however, permitted burning tahor with tamei. The Gemara initially suggested that Rabbi Meir maintains that Rabbi Chanina's statement referred to burning meat that had become tamei through a biblical av hatumah together with meat that had become tamei through a rabbinically imposed tumah, which would be tahor biblically. Although the shelishi meat was tahor biblically, since it was rabbinically deemed tamei, the Kohanim were permitted to burn it together with meat that was rendered a rishon biblically, thus making the rabbinically tamei meat a Sheini. The reason this was permitted was because food cannot biblically make other food tamei, so the Chachamim did not prohibit making food that was previously tamei rabbinically into a higher level of rabbinic tumah. The explanation of the Mishnah would then be that Rabbi Meir derived statement from the words of Rabbi Chanina, and since Rabbi Chanina stated that meat that became tamei rabbinically was allowed to be burned with meat that was biblically tamei, the same should hold true regarding tahor chametz of terumah in the sixth hour of the fourteenth of Nissan. Since the chametz becomes rabbinically prohibited for benefit, one is allowed to burn it together with food that is tamei even though the tamei food will rabbinically render the food that was tahor to be tamei. (14b-15a)

10. Rabbi Eliezer and Rabbi Yehudah agree on one point and disagree on another point.

Rabbi Eliezer and Rabbi Yehoshua agree with regard to tahor chametz of terumah and tamei terumah that each one is burned separately. They disagree with regard to terumah that has a doubt if it became tamei, which cannot be eaten or burned, and with regard to terumah that is tamei. Rabbi Eliezer maintains that each one should be burned separately, because even terumah that is suspended must be safeguarded, whereas Rabbi Yehoshua maintains that they can both be burned together, because terumah that is suspended cannot be eaten and there is no necessity to safeguard such terumah from becoming tamei.

Rabbi Yose states that even Rabbi Yehoshua agrees that one cannot burn tahor chametz of terumah with terumah that is tamei. (14b)

DAILY MASHAL

Removing Tumah

The Gemara discusses the laws of tumah and taharah, ritual contamination and purity. It is fascinating that the source of these laws is taught in Maseches Pesachim. Clearly, the authors of the Mishnah intended that these laws be incorporated in this Maseches, and the reason for this can be found in the words of the Medrash. The Medrash states that when Moshe was offering the Korban Pesach in Egypt the Jewish People smelled the intoxicating aroma, they came running to Moshe, imploring him that they be allowed to partake from the Korban Pesach. Moshe responded that any male that was uncircumcised was forbidden to partake in the Korban Pesach, and the Jewish People then circumcised themselves. The Jewish people were steeped in idolatry in Egypt, and idolatry is compared to tumas meis, tumah from a corpse. By circumcising themselves and distancing themselves from idolatry, the Jewish People purified themselves and were allowed to partake in the Korban Pesach. Similarly, the laws of tumah and taharah are incorporated in Maseches Pesachim to teach us that in order to offer sacrifices and attain closeness to Hashem, we must purify ourselves by ridding the impurities that we have absorbed and by performing mitzvos, and then we can truly come closer to Hashem.
