Mishna

A scribe who writes the tofes (the text of the get, not including the names of the people and the date) of a get must leave blank spaces for the names of the man, woman and the date.

Similarly, by a loan document, he must leave blank spaces for the names of the lender and the borrower, the amount of money and the date.

Similarly, by a sale document, he must leave blank spaces for the names of the buyer and the seller, the purchase price, the designation of the field and the date.

This was instituted as a remedy (the Gemora will explain).

Rabbi Yehudah disqualifies all of the above documents. Rabbi Elozar holds that they are all valid except for a bill of divorce, for regarding a get it is written: And he writes for her. The get must be written for the sake of that particular woman. (26a)

Rabbi Elozar

Rav Yehudah said in the name of Shmuel: The scribe must leave a space blank for the words “Behold, you are permitted to any man.” And the Mishna would be in accordance with Rabbi Elozar who holds that the witnesses on the delivery of the get render the get effective and therefore the writing of the get (its essential parts) must be written lishmah. [Rabbi Elozar holds that Biblically, it is not necessary for witnesses to sign on a get. When the Torah writes “and he shall write for her,” it is teaching us the halachos of the writing of the get.]

The Gemora explains why it was necessary for Shmuel to inform us that three anonymous Mishnayos are in accordance with the opinion of Rabbi Elozar. (26a)

Helping the Scribes

The Mishna had stated: This was instituted as a remedy.

The Gemora asks: Who did this ruling help?

Rabbi Yochanan said: It helped the scribe and we are following the opinion of Rabbi Elozar who holds that the witnesses on the delivery of the get render the get effective. And in truth, the scribe should not be allowed to write even the tofes beforehand (for perhaps this will lead him to write the toref beforehand and that would be Biblically invalid, for it must be written lishmah). Because we wanted to improve the scribe’s situation, the sages permitted them to write the tofes beforehand (this way, they would have gittin prepared for when they needed them). [The Gemora proceeds to explain the Tannaim’s opinions mentioned in the Mishna.] Rabbi Yehudah disqualifies all types of documents, for he was concerned that the scribes would also write the toref beforehand. This decree extended to other documents as well out of the concern that they wouldn’t make a distinction between other documents and a get. Rabbi Elozar validated all documents written in this manner except for a get because he was concerned that the scribes would also write the toref beforehand, but he was not concerned that people wouldn't make a distinction between other documents and a get. (26a)

More Rabbi Elozar

The Mishna had stated: Rabbi Elozar holds that they are all valid except for a bill of divorce, for regarding a get it is written: And he writes for her. The get must be written for the sake of that particular woman.

The Gemora asks: Is that verse not referring to the toref (how does Rabbi Elozar use it to invalidate a get where the tofes was not written lishmah)?

The Gemora answers: The Mishna should be emended slightly to read the following: because regarding a get it is written: And he writes for her. [Since the scribe is required to write the toref lishmah, the Chachamim decreed that the tofes should also be written lishmah.]

The Gemora asks: Rabbi Elozar is seemingly contradicting himself (for Rabbi Yonasan explained the beginning of the Mishna, that the tofes may be written beforehand, according to Rabbi Elozar, and now we are explaining the last ruling according to Rabbi Elozar that the tofes cannot be written beforehand)!

The Gemora answers: There are two Tannaim who argue as to what his opinion really is. (26a)

Remedy

Rabbi Shabsi in the name of Chizkiyah suggests another explanation in the Mishna's remedy. It is to prevent quarrelling and the Mishna is following Rabbi Meir's viewpoint, who said that the signatures of the witnesses render the get effective. and in truth, it should be permitted for the scribe to write beforehand even the toref, but if that would occur, it might happen that a woman might hear a scribe reading over what he had written and she might think (since she heard her husband's name and her own name) that her husband instructed him to write it. This will result in a quarrel between them.

Rav Chisda in the name of Avimi suggests another explanation in the Mishna's remedy. It is for the relief of the agunos. Some say that this explanation follows Rabbi Meir, and some say that it follows Rabbi Elozar. Some say it follows Rabbi Meir who held that the witnesses to the signatures make the get effective, and therefore, in truth, it is permissible to write even the toref beforehand. However, it may happen sometimes that a husband quarrels with his wife and while he is angry, he will throw the prepared get to her, rendering her an agunah (in this context, a woman without a husband). Some say it follows Rabbi Elozar who held that the witnesses to its delivery make the get effective, and therefore, in truth, even the tofes of the get should not be written beforehand. However, it may happen sometimes that the man wants to go abroad (in a hurry) and does not find a scribe ready. He might leave her without giving her the get and render her an agunah (for she will not be able to marry anyone). (26b)

Leaving Blank Spaces

The Mishna had stated: The scribe must leave blank spaces for the names of the man, woman and the date.

The Mishna made no distinction between a get after nisuin and one after erusin. Now, it is understandable in the case of a get after nisuin (it should not be predated) whether according to the view that the date is required to prevent a man from protecting his sister's daughter (who was also his wife). [They were concerned that she committed adultery, and the husband wishes to protect her (in order that she should not be executed) because she is his relative. He would therefore write for her a get without a date written on it and she could claim that she was not a married woman at that time. The Chachamim decreed that the date should be recorded on the get in order to preclude this.] or whether according to the view that it is required on account of the fruit (from his wife's melog property). In a get after erusin, however, the regulation is certainly understandable according to the view that the date is required to prevent a man from protecting his sister's daughter. However, according to the view that it is required on account of the fruit, does the law of usufruct apply to a betrothed woman?

Rav Amram said: I heard a certain remark from Ulla, who said that it is to protect the interest of the child, and I did not know what he meant (for how can there be a child after erusin). I understood it, however, when I came across the following braisa: If a man says, if he would tell the scribe, "Write a get for my arusah, and when I perform nisuin with her, I will divorce her," this get is not valid. And commenting on this, Ulla said: What is the reason? It is because people may say that her get came before her child. [If she were to have a child after the nisuin, but the get will be dated sometime during the erusin (prior to the nisuin), people will mistakenly think that this child was born out of wedlock. The get is therefore invalid because it is regarded as an "old get," a case where they secluded with each other after the get had been written.] So too, here, the date is required, lest people should say that her get came before her child.

Rabbi Zeira said in the name of Rabbi Abba bar Shila who said it in the name of Rav Hamnuna the Elder who said it from Rav Adda bar Ahavah who said in the name of Rav: The halacha follows the ruling of Rabbi Elozar (the scribe can write the text of the tofes beforehand). Rav designated Rabbi Elozar 'the most fortunate of the wise men.'

The Gemora asks: Does then the halacha follow Rav in regard to other documents also? But didn't Rav Pappi say in the name of Rava: A certification by judges that was written before the witnesses have identified their signatures is invalid!? The reason is that it seems to contain a falsehood (such an attestation has the appearance of a false declaration). So too, here, the documents seem to contain a falsehood!?

The Gemora answers: Rava's ruling is not accepted, as shown by the statement of Rav Nachman, who said: Rabbi Meir used to say that even if a husband found a bill of divorce in a rubbish heap, and then had it signed and gave it to her, it is valid (even though it appears false). And even the Rabbis disagree with Rabbi Meir only in respect to letters of divorce, where it is necessary that the writing shall be done specifically in her name, but in respect of other legal documents, they would agree with him. For Rav Assi stated in the name of Rabbi Yochanan: A man may not borrow again using a document on which he has once borrowed and which he has repaid since the lien incurred by the first loan (to collect land that the borrower had at the time of the loan) was cancelled. It can be inferred that the only reason is because the lien was cancelled, but, otherwise, the document would be valid, and we are not concerned that it has the appearance of a falsehood. (26b)

INSIGHTS TO THE DAF

Essence of the Get

A scribe who writes the tofes (the text of the get, not including the names of the people and the date) of a get must leave blank spaces for the names of the man, woman and the date.

The Mishna Lamelech writes that it is necessary to write the location of the man and the woman as well.

Tosfos Yom Tov asks: Why doesn't the Mishna mention that the scribe is required to leave spaces blank for their locations as well?

He proves from here that the omission of the city names will not invalidate a get.

The Rashba rejects the proof by saying that perhaps it is included in that which the Mishna says: the names of the man and the woman.

It is brought in the name of Rabbeinu Tam that if their locations are omitted from the get, the get is invalid.

Proof to this is from the fact that the Mishna did not make mention of the fact that he has to leave a blank space for the words "Behold, you are permitted to any man," and if that is not written, the get is ruled to be invalid.

Tosfos writes that this precise language was not found in the earlier gittin, however, similar expressions were used and therefore, their gittin were valid.

The Ramban concludes that if this exact expression ("Behold, you are permitted to any man") is not written in the get, the get is disqualified and if she has already remarried, she must leave that man.

DAILY MASHAL

The Steipler Gaon notes that the verse, sefer kerisus venasan beyadah veshilchah (a document of severance; and he shall place it in her hand and send her out) is the same numerical value as "zehu gufo shel get: harei at muteres lechal adam" (this is the essence of the get: "Behold, you are permitted to any man").
