Sotah Daf 20

Produced by Rabbi Avrohom Adler, Kollel Boker Beachwood

Daf Notes is currently being dedicated to the neshamot of

Moshe Raphael ben Yehoshua (Morris Stadtmauer) o”h

Tzvi Gershon ben Yoel (Harvey Felsen) o”h

May the studying of the Daf Notes be a zechus for their neshamot and may their souls find peace in Gan Eden and be bound up in the Bond of life

Bitter

The father of Shmuel said: Something bitter should be placed into the water because the verse states: The bitter waters. This implies that it should be bitter before the scroll is erased into them. (20a)

Mishna

If before the scroll has been erased she said: “I will not drink,” her scroll is hidden away and her minchah offering is scattered on the ashes. Her scroll is not valid to give to another sotah to drink. If the scroll has been erased and she says: “I am defiled,” the water is spilled out and her minchah offering is scattered on the ashes. If the scroll has been erased and she says: “I will not drink,” they force her to drink against her will.

As she finishes drinking, her face turns yellow and her eyes bulge and she becomes full of veins (her veins swell and protrude), and they (the onlookers) call out: Take her out! in order that she doesn’t cause the Temple Courtyard to become tamei.

If she had any merit, it would suspend her punishment. Certain merits suspend it for one year; others can suspend it for two years; and others suspend it for three years. From here Ben Azzai said: A man is required to teach his daughter Torah, so that if she drinks, she will know that her merits may suspend it for her. Rabbi Eliezer says: Whoever teaches his daughter Torah has taught her lewdness. Rabbi Yehoshua says: A woman prefers one kav and lewdness rather than nine kavs and abstinence.

He used to say: A foolish pious person, a cunning evildoer, a self-righteous woman and the blows of the self-righteous - these ruin the world. (20a)

Kankantom

Rav Yehudah said in the name of Shmuel: Rabbi Meir said: When I studied by Rabbi Akiva, he would put kankantom, an ingredient that makes the ink indelible, into the ink that he used for writing a Sefer Torah. Rabbi Akiva did not object to this practice. When I went to study by Rabbi Yishmael, Rabbi Yishmael told me to be meticulous as a scribe, because a scribe performs the work of Heaven, and adding or subtracting one letter could cause the destruction of the whole world. [This means to say that people could be led astray if the words of the Torah are not written entirely correct.] I told Rabbi Yishmael that I put kankantom in the ink. Rabbi Yishmael objected to this, because regarding the writing that is necessary for a sotah, the Torah states ... umachah ... and he shall erase... and we derive from this that the writing has to be of an ink that is capable of being erased. [Kankantom, which makes the ink indelible, cannot be used.]

The Gemora asks: What is the explanation of the discussion between Rabbi Yishmael and Rabbi Meir?

The Gemora explains the meaning of Rabbi Meir’s statement: Rabbi Meir informed Rabbi Yishmael that he is an expert in spelling every word correctly, so he would not err in adding or subtracting letters, but Rabbi Meir was concerned about a fly landing on the crown of the letter dalet and erase the crown, causing it to look like the letter reish. For this reason, Rabbi Meir told Rabbi Yishmael that he puts kankantom in the ink (so even if the ink becomes rubbed out, some of the original writing would still exist, and one will not confuse the letter dalet for the letter reish).

The Gemora asks: Is this so? But we learned in a braisa: Rabbi Meir said: When I studied by Rabbi Yishmael, I put kankantom in the ink, and he did not object. However, when I went to study by Rabbi Akiva, he forbade me to do so.

The Gemora explains its question: There is an inconsistency regarding the order of teachers under whom Rabbi Meir studied (Shmuel cited a braisa which stated that Rabbi Meir initially studied by Rabbi Akiva and then by Rabbi Yishmael; the second braisa states exactly the opposite) and there is an inconsistency regarding who forbade it (Shmuel cited a braisa which stated that Rabbi Yishmael forbade the placing of kankantom into the ink; the second braisa states that it was Rabbi Akiva who forbade it!)?

The Gemora answers: Originally, Rabbi Meir studied by Rabbi Akiva, but Rabbi Meir was not able to ascertain his true opinion (whether Rabbi Akiva was stating the actual halacha or if he was stating the opposite of the halacha with the intent of analyzing the possible rationale for that position). Rabbi Meir then went to study by Rabbi Yishmael, and after learning the traditions from Rabbi Yishmael, Rabbi Meir went back to study and analyze the laws under Rabbi Akiva.

The Gemora concludes that the question regarding who forbade the placing of the kankantom into the ink is indeed a difficulty. (20a)

Written Specifically for her

The Gemora cites a braisa: Rabbi Yehudah said: Rabbi Meir used to say: For all writing of Scripture, one may place kankantom in the ink used for writing, except for Parashas Sotah (the portion in the Torah that discusses the details of the suspected adulteress). Rabbi Yaakov, however, maintains that Rabbi Meir said that for all writing of Scripture (including Parashas Sotah) one may place kankantom in the ink used for writing, except for the portion of Parashas Sotah that was written specifically for use in the Bais HaMikdash.

Rabbi Yirmiyah states that the difference between the version of Rabbi Yehudah and the version of Rabbi Yaakov is using a regular Torah scroll for the sotah procedure. [According to Rabbi Yehudah, the verses of Parasha Sotah that are written in the Torah scroll itself can be used to erase in the bitter waters that the Sotah is given to drink. This portion cannot be written in indelible ink, since the verses must be erased into the water. According to the version of Rabbi Yaakov, however, the verses of Parashas Sotah must be written specifically for the Sotah, so indelible ink cannot be used for the Parashas Sotah, as the verses must dissolve in the water. Indelible ink can be used, however, for any part of a Torah scroll, because according to the version of Rabbi Yaakov, a Torah scroll was not used for the Parashas Sotah.]

The Gemora compares this Tannaic argument with a different one. For we learned in a braisa: The sotah scroll cannot be used for a different sotah. [Seemingly, he would agree with Rabbi Yaakov that a Torah scroll is not valid to be used for a sotah, since it was not written for that particular sotah.] Rabbi Achai bar Yoshiyah said: It may be used for another sotah. [He would agree with Rabbi Yehudah that a Torah scroll may be used for a sotah to drink, for it does not have to be written specifically for that particular woman.]

Rav Pappa disagrees: Perhaps the Tanna Kamma (of the second braisa) holds that only there, where the scroll was written for one specific woman, it cannot be redesignated to be used for a different woman; however, a Torah scroll may be used, for it was not written for any particular woman.

Rav Nachman bar Yitzchak suggests another reason (why the two arguments are not parallel): Perhaps Rabbi Achai bar Yoshiyah only said that a scroll which was written for one sotah can be used for another because it was written for the purpose of a curse; however, a Torah scroll, which was written to study from, cannot be used for a sotah.

The Gemora asks: Does Rabbi Achai bar Yoshiyah not hold by the following Mishna: If one writes a bill of divorce with the intention to divorce his wife, and then he changed his mind and decided that he will not divorce her, and a resident of the same city met him and said, “Your name and my name are the same, and your wife’s name and my wife’s name are the same, so let me use this bill of divorce,” the bill of divorce is invalid for the second man.

The Gemora answers: There it is because the Torah states vekasav lah, and he shall write unto her, and this teaches that the bill of divorce must be written specifically for her.

The Gemora asks: But here it says veasah lah, and he shall do for her?

The Gemora answers: The verse only means that the erasing of the scroll must be for that particular sotah. (20a – 20b)

Take her Out!

The Mishna stated: And they (the onlookers) call out: Take her out! in order that she doesn’t cause the Temple Courtyard to become tamei.

The Gemora asks: It would seem that we are concerned that perhaps she will die. Does this mean to say that a corpse is forbidden in the Levite camp? But we did not learn like that in a braisa: One who is tamei with corpse tumah is allowed to enter the Levite camp. And even a corpse itself is allowed to be brought in, as it is written: And Moshe brought the bones of Yosef with him. The words “with him” mean that they were within his boundary (in the Levite camp, the place where Moshe lived).

Abaye answers: We are concerned that she will menstruate (because she is afraid of the bitter waters; and a niddah is forbidden in the Levite camp).

The Gemora cites proof for this from the Megillah, where it is written: And the Queen became sorely afraid. Rav explained this to mean that she began to menstruate (we see that fright can lead to menstruation).

The Gemora asks: But we have learned in a Mishna that trembling can hold back a woman from menstruating!

The Gemora answers: Fear holds it back, but a sudden fright can cause a woman to menstruate prematurely. (20b)

Delaying the Punishment

The Mishna had stated: If she had any merit, it would suspend her punishment. Certain merits suspend it for one year; others can suspend it for two years; and others suspend it for three years.

The Gemora asks: Who is our Mishna going according to? It cannot be Abba Yosi ben Chanan, nor Rabbi Elozar ben Yitzchak of Kefar Darom, nor Rabbi Yishmael! For it has been taught in the following braisa: If she possesses a merit, it can suspend the punishment for three months, which is the amount of time for a pregnancy to become recognizable. These are the words of Abba Yosi ben Chanan. Rabbi Elozar ben Yitzchak of Kefar Darom says: It can prevent the punishment from taking effect for nine months. Rabbi Yishmael says: For twelve months.

The Gemora answers: It can be in accordance with Rabbi Yishmael's opinion, for he found a verse that states (the concept of delaying the punishment) it three times (and thus, it may be postponed up until three years). (20b – 21a)

INSIGHTS TO THE DAF

Hidden Away

The Mishna had stated: If before the scroll has been erased she said: "I will not drink," her scroll is hidden away and her minchah offering is scattered on the ashes.

Rashi learns that they are hidden away at the sides of the Sanctuary, for all sacred writings which cannot be used any longer are hidden away in a place that they will not be treated with disrespect.

In the sefer Torah Haohel, he asks, why did the sotah scroll have to be hidden away? Couldn't they have given it to a child in order for him to learn the portion in the Torah dealing with the sotah?

He answers that since it was written with sanctity, and it contains the Name of Hashem, they were concerned that the children will not treat the scroll with the proper respect, and therefore it was required to be hidden away.

Furthermore, he says that it would be degrading for the woman, for everyone would say that this is the scroll that was prepared for So-and-So the sotah.

Tosfos cites a Yerushalmi (and some understand that this is what Rashi means as well) that the scroll is hidden away in the hinges of the Sanctuary door. The opening and closing of the door will cause that it will be worn away.

The Minchas Kenaos asks: How would it be permitted to erase Hashem's Name by opening and closing the door? The Gemora Makkos (22a) rules that one who erases Hashem's Name receives lashes! Since the opening and closing of the door will certainly result in the erasure of His Name, it should be regarded as a "direct erasing," and should be forbidden!

The Ridvaz answers: Since the Name of Hashem was written on this scroll with the intention that it will be erased (in the bitter waters), there is no prohibition to erase this Name. It is not regarded as a permanent inscription, and therefore it would be permitted to erase it.

DAILY MASHAL

Merits

The Mishna had stated: If she had any merit, it would suspend her punishment. Certain merits suspend it for one year; others can suspend it for two years; and others suspend it for three years.

Ben Yehoyadah explains: There are certain mitzvos that can only be fulfilled during the day. If the woman performed such a mitzvah, the merit can delay her punishment for one year, i.e. twelve months, which corresponds to the twelve hours of the day. There are some mitzvos, such as the reading of the Megillah, which apply by day and by night. Performance of such a mitzvah can postpone her punishment for two years, twenty-four months, corresponding to the twenty-four hours of the day and night. There are mitzvos that are applicable for a day, night and a day, such as the mitzvah of fasting on Yom Kippur. The Gemora tells us that one who eats on the ninth day is regarded as if he fasted on the ninth and the tenth (of Tishrei). According to many poskim, the mitzvah of eating on Erev Yom Kippur can only be fulfilled during the day; not the night before. The mitzvah of Shabbos is also a mitzvah which comprises thirty-six hours, since there is a mitzvah to prepare for Shabbos on Friday. If the woman performed these mitzvos, the merits can hold back her punishment for thirty-six months, three years.
